The Elective Franchise.

A question now comes up before the American people for settlement, which will require the exercise of great caution in its management and on the decision of which many serious uncertainties of the future must inevitably depend. It is a question growing directly out of the overthrow of the slaveholders' rebellion, and includes in its scope not only the "emancipated slaves" but their former masters and the "poor white trash," whom they drew to the defence of treason, as well. In its consideration we should be as far removed from the influence of habitual prejudices, on one side, as from the impulse that would plead for too great leniency on the other, and above all, about to be guided by perfect justice in awarding to each class the true measure of its deserts.

The rebellion involved in its results two races of men, composed of three distinct classes in the South, the masters and slaves forming the extremes, united by an intermediate class—the "poor whites." That the former, or those who represented them, organized and conducted the rebellion to its issue, we presume no one will deny. They were supported, more or less willingly, by an overwhelming majority of the residue of the white Southern population. The slaves were the only exception, as a class, to the prevailing disloyalty of the South, and from them has come all the local assistance our armies have received in their marches and campaigns through the hostile territory during the war.

The war has ceased only with the complete overthrow of rebels in arms, and, as operating upon individuals, its results are—the white classes have, by participation in treason, forfeited the rights and privileges of citizenship, one of which is the right to vote, while their former slaves become free, merely citizens with their status undisturbed, and therefore standing, with respect to the elective franchise, on precisely the same footing as their late masters. It is in the investment of these freedmen and the rehabilitation of the recent rebels, with the rights of citizenship, that we find the difficulties now occupying a large share of public attention, both at home and abroad, and the success of what is called "reconstruction," as securing the benefits of national triumph and of future peace, depends in a great measure on the disposition made of this delicate question.

What, then, are their relative claims upon the nation to be admitted within the pale, and to all the inestimable privileges of citizenship? The objection to the one is, a voluntary act of treason, to the other, a supposed inferiority in point of natural capacity. Granting both these propositions, the question reduces itself to one of comparative demerit, as between men, wanting in natural endowment, but never so in their allegiance, and others, proud of their nobility of race, yet only making good their boast of superiority by talents misapplied. As between the two, we must frankly confess our preference for the former, believing there is always less danger, in trusting to honest ignorance, than confiding in any intelligence whose greatest capacity is for mischief. It is the difference between a mediocrity of intellect, or something even worse than mediocrity, and intellect perverted—between passive good and positive evil.

We always believed, that education and intelligence were a truer test of the primitive right to the elective franchise than any mere property qualification such as the latter has found preference, especially in the southern States. But, whatever rival theories may be adopted, those States are now, to all intents and purposes, mere territories, so weak in loyalty that the powers of proper government are paralyzed and are sustained or assumed per necessity by the foundation head of authority—the national Government. Hence, any, who may be now admitted to citizenship in those States, come in under the auspices of the popular national will and should not, in justice, be subjected to any local restrictions, as to rights enjoyed, the lingering relics of institutions which have passed away.

True the negro is no less a negro because he is free, but it is equally true, that none of God's children are so humble as not to have a just claim to protection of life and those inalienable rights co-existent therewith. There is another right, which accompanies those of liberty and the privilege of possessing in peace property honestly acquired, the right to redress when wronged, and what milder form of protest against injury or oppression can be imagined or devised than in the simple yet inalienable privilege of depositing a ballot?

We have the negro and cannot get rid of him—he seems destined as a heritage of the Republic. We have enslaved him and the consequences are still fresh in our memories—let us not again draw down the vengeance of Heaven, even in less degree, for a sin of lesser magnitude, but the same in kind. Let us not, by casting them off, create, or confirm if you will, a race of paupers, but rather, by encouragement, strive to make them men, with the feelings and aspirations of men. Finally, it is not our deed, that traitors have any rights, which we are bound to respect, superior to those possessed by men, who found their freedom in fighting to subdue their rebel masters.

HAD A FIGHT.—The troops at or near Platte Bridge had a skirmish with the Indians on the day the Telegraph line was cut in that vicinity, the particulars of which have not yet been received. It is stated, however, that several of the latter were killed.

LATER.
Platte Bridge, July 26th.
Number of Indians estimated from 1500 to 3000. Heavy skirmishing during the afternoon. Large number of Indians killed. Exact number not known. Number of soldiers killed was 27. Lt. Collins, Co. G, 11th Cav. O. V., was killed while leading twenty Kansas troops in charge against about 600 Indians. The Indians divided and went South.

WHAT'S THAT?—The Leavenworth Times, of June 25, says: "Mr. G. W. Pritchett, for a long time a resident of this city, leaves to-morrow morning, on the overland coach, for Salt Lake and Virginia City, Montana. He has sent a stock of goods to the latter place, and expects to go into business there. . . . It is hard to find a more genial fellow, his many friends part with him with regret. During his absence he will occasionally correspond for the Times and we know he will give a good description of what he sees among the mines and Mormons. There is some danger of his joining the Mormons, as he believes in the principal article of their faith."

THE Installation of the Officer of Utah Lodge, No. 1, I. O. O. F., will take place at their Hall in Salt Lake City, on Thursday evening, August 3d, 1865, at 7 o'clock, p. m.

Members of the Order in good standing, and sejourning Brethren are respectfully invited to attend. The Acting Grand Sir will read a Salutary from the Most Worthy Isaac M. Welch, Grand Sir. The Installation will be conducted by James W. Ellis, Acting M. W. Grand Sir, assisted by Col. Milo George, Grand Warden; D. Calder, Grand Secretary; A. Lesser, Grand Treasurer; S. Lesser, Grand Marshal; Whitebread, Grand Guardian; Rev. Norman McLeod, Grand Chaplain.

What Mr. Bowles Writes.

Mr. S. Bowles, editor and proprietor of the Springfield, Mass., Republican, the most influential journal of New England, thus writes to his paper, from Colorado. Mr. Bowles will be remembered here as the "silent partner" of the Colfax company:

"We dropped Gen. Connor, who had been our fellow passenger from Atchison, early Friday morning, at Julesburg, where he has his headquarters for the summer, and where the Platte River flows, one branch extending north to Fort Laramie and the South Pass through the mountains, and the other marking our easterly line to Denver. Julesburg is only a village of tents and turf huts and barns, affording no facilities for a luxurious military life; but it is well located for Gen. Connor's plans for protecting the commerce of the Plains from the Indians and for punishing them for their past offenses and present threatenings against it. We took a parting breakfast with him in camp, just at sunrise, eating canned chicken and oysters off tin plates, and drinking our coffee with the brownest of sugar and the most concentrated of milk, all in the simplest and most barren of border life. But we parted from him with real regret and a large respect. He had shown himself to us both a genuine gentleman and a valuable commandant; and we found reason in our personal acquaintance to confirm the judgment of the people of all this region, that he is of all men, whom the government has assigned to the duty, the most fit and efficient for restraining the Indians, protecting and developing the interests of government and people, for settling the Mormon problem, for giving order and unity to the incoherent and chaotic social and material life of all this vast region. Gen. Connor has been for two years in command at Utah, and of his administration there and his views of the Mormons, I shall have occasion to speak when I am on the spot. It is only two months since he had assigned to him, also, the protection of the overland routes across the plains; but everybody hereabouts notes with pride and confidence the change already introduced. The soldiers have ceased to be thieves and bullies; a new and better social tone is visible in all the mining region; the laws are better respected; soldiers guard the whole central line of travel, and cavalrymen escort every stage—there is no longer any real danger, or will not be so soon as a few more troops can be put in their places, in travelling or freighting over the main road from the river to the mountains; the Indians will speedily be driven back to their reservations, and forced to submit to whatever terms the government may dictate; prices will fall along the plains and in the territories on the eastern slopes of the mountains; and all the business of this vast and rich region will receive, under certainty and safety, an impetus and given uniformity that have never before marked its history. Whether the Indians will be wholly exterminated, or forced into submission and half civilization in limited territories, undisputed for the present by the Whites; or set to work upon the Pacific Railroad—these are not points for Gen. Connor to decide. The choice belongs to the government at Washington. But Gen. Connor will certainly restrain them from violence, and punish them for their barbarities. He believes they can be made useful in building the Pacific Railroad; and he has proposed to furnish 2000 of one or two tribes, who have already submitted to his authority, and whose he is now supporting at an enormous expense far distant from his base of supplies, to the railroad company for an experiment."

Tribute to Our Late Governor.

PARALLEL to resolutions respecting the death of His Excellency James D. Drake, Governor of Utah Territory, presented to the Young Men's Literary Association of Salt Lake City, at a special meeting held Wednesday evening, July 20th, 1865, by a committee consisting of Capt. D. B. Stover, Hon. Judge Drake and Rev. N. McLeod, which were placed upon the minutes.

Mr. President.—As a prelude to the resolutions which are to be reported, permit me to say that it is now more than fifty years since I became acquainted with the late Governor of this Territory—the Hon. James D. Drake.

At the time of our first acquaintance we were students at Aurora Academy, in Cayuga County and State of New York. From that institution, in 1816, he went to Lowell, in Lewis County, and, as a student, entered the law office of Mr. Collins, a brother of Mrs. Doty.

In 1819, he emigrated to Michigan, and, at an early day admitted to the bar, and commenced the practice of his profession in the city of Detroit.

At the session of Congress in 1823, that part of Michigan lying west of Lake Michigan and including the island of Mackinaw, was set off into a separate Judicial District, and Mr. Doty was appointed Judge thereof. He was the first Federal civil officer ever appointed in that vast country lying west of Lake Michigan, out of which the States of Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota have been created.

During the time he performed the duties in that District his residence was usually at or near Green Bay. He was a member of the last Legislative Council that ever convened in Michigan, whilst it was a Territory, at which time he represented all that portion lying west of Lake Michigan.

Judge Doty was one of the pioneers of Civil Society in that region. He remained in Wisconsin when that Territory became separated from Michigan.

With the rise and progress of Wisconsin as a Territory—and its establishment as a State—Judge Doty was early and intimately connected; a full history of him during that period would be a history of the State and Territory.

His residence was in Wisconsin from 1823 to 1851. In the Autumn of that year he came to this Territory as Superintendent of Indian Affairs.

After our separation as school fellows we met again in the City of Detroit, in 1822, and our meetings were occasional until Wisconsin was separated from Michigan.

He was the first person who accosted me after I arrived in this City in July, 1862. His voice was that of his youth, and the recognition was instantaneous, though we have not met for twenty-two years.

Never did it occur to me in our hours of youthful sport, that in years of mature manhood, in a region then unknown, and so remote from the scenes of our youth, that it would be my duty to help to bear him to the grave, and equally distant has been the thought that it would be awarded to me to present these resolutions which express the feelings of this Society upon the sad occasion, for the loss of one of its members and its sympathies for the loss, the irreparable loss to the afflicted relatives.

T. J. DRAKE.
The committee to which the subject had been referred made the following report:
Resolved, that it having pleased our Father in Heaven to call from this earthly abode on the 13th of June last the spirit of one of this Association, the Hon. James D. Drake, late Governor of this Territory, with humility we bow to the mandate of the Great Governor of the Universe.

That by this sad event Society has been deprived of one of its most amiable members, Government of one of its useful and reliable servants, and the family of kind, just and indulgent husband and father.

That to the widow and family whose loss is irreparable, are tendered in this hour of affliction the sympathies of this Association.

That with their lamentations we desire to mingle our thoughts of sorrow for the absence of him who slept.
That for her support in this bereavement, we implore the power, the love and the mercy of "Him who doeth all things well."
That the foregoing resolutions be entered in the proceedings of this association, and that a copy thereof signed by the President and Secretary be forwarded to Mrs. Doty.

KNOWLES' train of twenty wagons left Fort Leavenworth for Fort Halleck on Monday. The cattle were in excellent condition for the trip, and the wagons were new. So says the Leavenworth Times of July 1st. The same paper adds that Capt. Murley, at the Fort, is sending 1,000,000 pounds of freight per week to different points in the West. This department is carried on with a vigor that has never been surpassed. Also, that a train was unloading on the levee, yesterday, that brought 40,000 pounds of wool from New Mexico. This trade is immense; the levee is constantly thronged with wagons being loaded and unloaded.
